

● DOISY & DAM

Summer just got sweeter.

An integrated marketing campaign to put a vegan chocolate brand in front of younger UK buyers.

CASE STUDY · VIKRANT KALUKHE

A good brand nobody young had noticed.

Doisy & Dam make vegan dark chocolate in the UK. Real ingredients, ethical sourcing.

Although Doisy & Dam had the proper product and morals, the younger customers who would have loved it had not yet discovered the brand.

For my MSc I built a summer campaign to fix that. One simple idea runs across every channel, so the brand looks and sounds the same wherever someone meets it.

Make your summer a little sweeter.

THE BIG IDEA

Summer just got sweeter

This was an academic strategy project. The plan and channel thinking are mine; the paid tactics are proposed, not live spend.

WHO WE'RE TALKING TO

The buyer I built the plan around.

Younger, health-minded and aware of where their food comes from. They happily pay a bit more for something that fits how they want to live.

LIFESTYLE

Health & socially aware

43%

of UK Gen Z and Millennials say they trust a creator's word over a normal ad. So the plan leans on the right creators, not louder advertising.

Premium, but with a clear reason why.

- Doisy & Dam
Premium price, top quality, and a real ethics story. That mix is the gap I aimed the campaign at.
- Raw Chocolate Co.
Pricier and sustainable, but a smaller, more niche following.
- Ombar
Similar price, also dairy-free. The closest direct rival.
- Vego
Budget and fairtrade. Wins on price, not on premium feel.

Three channels, one summer idea.

Each channel does a different job, but they all carry the same look, line and hashtag, so the brand feels joined up.

01

Instagram

LEAD CHANNEL · BUILD AWARENESS

- Sponsored reels with a vegan-niche food creator, baking with the chocolate
- Carousel ads for new flavours and the ethical sourcing story
- Behind-the-scenes from the farms and factory in Stories

02

YouTube

REACH · PROOF FROM CREATORS

- Product seeding to established creators for honest taste reviews
- Short skippable and non-skippable ads on the summer flavours
- Runs across the summer to keep the brand in view

03

TikTok

ATTENTION · FIRST THING
YOU SEE

- A TopView ad: bright, fast, full-screen on app open
- Links straight to the Instagram page and web site
- Made to grab a younger, scroll-fast audience

#Summerjustgot

One hashtag and one summer palette tie every post, ad and story together. Proposed paid tactics for a student campaign, not live media spend.

What it looks like in the feed.

Bright, simple, hard to scroll past.

The whole campaign uses one warm summer palette and the same friendly line. A shopper should know it's Doisy & Dam before they read a word.

Honest by design.

Reels and carousels lead with what makes the brand different: vegan, ethically sourced, no junk. Behind-the-scenes content from the farms backs it up, so the message feels true, not just an ad.

Concept mockup, built to show the look and tone. Not a live post.

The plan, and what it shows I can do.

THE GOAL

Get younger UK buyers to notice Doisy & Dam over one summer, and warm them up to the brand.

THE APPROACH

One idea across three channels, each picked for a clear job, all sharing the same look and hashtag.

WHAT IT PROVES

Analyse the data of the audience, find the gap in a market, and turn it into a paid channel plan that holds together.
